

Breakdown for work on the Final Report

Below is a schedule that you could help you keep organized for the final paper report. It involves a splitting up of the paper and working in each section as teams. It's always good to have one person organizing a section and then someone else works as an editor (check spelling, writing style, clear writing, ask questions, make suggestions etc.). Everyone should be the lead on a section, and as an editor on another section. If you are a lead on a shorter section, then you can help out more when you are an editor.

There is the final editing stage, ensuring that the paper reads as one cohesive paper. The paper should read similar to the papers that you have been reading. Everyone is assigned an overall editor/formatter and whoever are the strongest writers in the group, could be the final editors.

This shows a reasonable breakup for the work. The final checks (admin) may seem redundant but if everyone gives extra ~30-60 minutes to check it always makes a huge difference. It also sets potential deadlines so that everyone is clear about the timelines. You should assign names and include this in your meeting minutes.

I've suggested a timeline for the writing the final report over a week and half to account for different schedules. As a group, you can change the dates and administration duties to best suit your members. As a group, you can change the dates and administration duties to best suit your members but make sure to highlight changes in GREEN in the document before submitting.

Final Report schedule (due Thursday Dec 8, 11:00pm):REPORT: Max 8 pages (7-8 pages)

Each member will be the lead (main writer) for one section, and the editor (reviewer) for another section.

In addition, each member will be responsible for one 'administration' role e.g., paper merger, format checker, paper editors (final readers). Below is a short description of these duties. I have added an admin role in the breakdown of responsibilities, but you change these as long as each member has one admin role assigned and you update the members (M1, M2, etc) in the Timeline Schedule Table below.

Paper Merger (PM)	Image Checker (IM)	Format Checker (FC)	Final Paper Editor (PE1)	Final Paper Editor (PE2)
